

Figure 1: The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France

Figure 1: The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France

Planet Intelligence, a leading global travel and tourism research firm, has released its latest findings on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France. The report shows that the industry has experienced a significant decline in revenue, with a 14% decrease in 2020 compared to 2019. However, there is a strong recovery expected in 2021, with a projected 5% increase in revenue.

The report also highlights that the tourism industry in France is expected to recover by 2022, with a projected 10% increase in revenue compared to 2019. This recovery is driven by a combination of factors, including a strong rebound in domestic tourism and a significant increase in international travel. The report also notes that the tourism industry in France is expected to remain resilient in the face of future challenges, such as climate change and geopolitical tensions.

Planet Intelligence, a leading global travel and tourism research firm, has released its latest findings on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France. The report shows that the industry has experienced a significant decline in revenue, with a 14% decrease in 2020 compared to 2019. However, there is a strong recovery expected in 2021, with a projected 5% increase in revenue. The report also highlights that the tourism industry in France is expected to recover by 2022, with a projected 10% increase in revenue compared to 2019. This recovery is driven by a combination of factors, including a strong rebound in domestic tourism and a significant increase in international travel. The report also notes that the tourism industry in France is expected to remain resilient in the face of future challenges, such as climate change and geopolitical tensions.

Planet Intelligence, a leading global travel and tourism research firm, has released its latest findings on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France. The report shows that the industry has experienced a significant decline in revenue, with a 14% decrease in 2020 compared to 2019. However, there is a strong recovery expected in 2021, with a projected 5% increase in revenue. The report also highlights that the tourism industry in France is expected to recover by 2022, with a projected 10% increase in revenue compared to 2019. This recovery is driven by a combination of factors, including a strong rebound in domestic tourism and a significant increase in international travel. The report also notes that the tourism industry in France is expected to remain resilient in the face of future challenges, such as climate change and geopolitical tensions.

Planet Intelligence, a leading global travel and tourism research firm, has released its latest findings on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the tourism industry in France. The report shows that the industry has experienced a significant decline in revenue, with a 14% decrease in 2020 compared to 2019. However, there is a strong recovery expected in 2021, with a projected 5% increase in revenue. The report also highlights that the tourism industry in France is expected to recover by 2022, with a projected 10% increase in revenue compared to 2019. This recovery is driven by a combination of factors, including a strong rebound in domestic tourism and a significant increase in international travel. The report also notes that the tourism industry in France is expected to remain resilient in the face of future challenges, such as climate change and geopolitical tensions.

Date: 2019-04-01

Article link:

<https://www.tourism-review.ru/zeltie-zilety-uhudshaut-ekonomiku-turizma-vo-francii-news-10999>